Portfolio managers commentary

Several events in the month of May unsettled the Fixed Income Markets. US ten-year swap rates reached a seven-year high at 3.13% on May the 18th before falling back below 3%. Tariff barriers from the Trump administration were once again headline news. And Italy's populist coalition seemed destined for a head-on clash with Brussels on their European economic austerity constraints and immigration policy.

The FOMC meeting in June 2018 should confirm whether or not the rising interest rate dynamics in the United States are starting to slow. Uncertainty seems to prevail as to the ultimate political objective of the White house on tariff barriers; an outright 'trade war' or a negotiating ploy. As for the European Central Bank (ECB), the financial situation in Europe unveiled by the recent Italian political 'crisis' needs to be addressed on three levels:

- The Federalization of European government debt to take away individual sovereign bond risk, which could potentially impact commercial bank reserves (this is the system currently in place in the United States).
- Some sort of 'pan-European bad bank' vehicle to clean up once and for all toxic assets from stressed commercial bank balance sheets across the Eurozone.
- A push for further consolidation of the European Banking sector.

The ASG fund holds No exposure to any Italian Finance or Insurance company, and has only a small allocation of less than 1% to the senior debt of an Italian Telecoms Corporation, which is part-owned by the multinational Vivendi Group of France.

The re-investment option currently available coupled with the May market volatility conditions enabled the fund to benefit from the investment opportunity outlined in our previous reports. Various bonds were acquired at a discount to their previous month price levels, with names such as CNP Insurance (France), DNB Bank (Norway), Erste Bank (Austria), Hartford Life Insurance (USA), Lloyds Bank (UK), MetLife Insurance (USA), and Swiss Re (Switzerland).

The allocation to bonds with a call or maturity date within one year now represent close to 30% of all the invested assets. The average gross carried yield was increased following these new investments from 4.78% in April to 5.12% in May. The modified duration was maintained at around 2yrs and the average rating is still at BBB.
